The Griefs of Childhood.

These little sorrows of childhood! when sorrow is all new and strange, when hope has not yet gotten to be beyond the days and weeks, and the space from summer to summer seems measureless. "Ah, my child, you will have real troubles to fret about by and by," is the consolation we have almost all of us had administered to us in our childhood, and have repeated to other children, since we have been grown up. We have all of us sobbed so piteously, standing with tiny bare legs, above our little socks, when we lost sight of our mother or nurse in some strange place; but we can no longer recall the poignancy of that moment, and weep over it, as we do over the remembered sufferings of five or ten years ago. Every one of those keen memories has left its trace, and lives in us still, but such traces have been blent themselves irretrievably with the firmer texture of our youth and manhood; and so it comes that we can look on at the troubles of our children with a smiling disbelief in the reality of their pain. In them any one who can recover the experience of his childhood, not merely with a memory of what he did and what happened to him, or what he liked and disliked when he was in frock and trousers, but with an intimate penetration, a revived consciousness of what he felt then—when it was so long from one midsummer to another? What he felt when his school-fellows put him out of their game because he would pitch the ball wrong out of a mensur-willfulness; or on a rainy day in the holidays, when he didn't know how to amuse himself, and fell from idleness into mischief, from mischief into defiance, and from defiance into sulking; or when his mother absolutely refused to let him have a tailed coat that "half," although every other boy of his age had gone into tails already? Surely if we could recall that early bitterness, and the dim guesses, the strangely perspicacious conception of life that gave the bitterness of its intensity, we should not pool-pool the grief of our children. Childhood has no forebodings; but then, it is soothed by no memories of outlived sorrow.—George Eliot.

Life Among the Lowly.

The Tribune tells the following story of some of the experiences of busy life among the fashionable summer resorts. The hero is Augustus, who is employed in a Broadway establishment which deals in wearing apparel for men. The clerk, having saved something from his earnings, went to a Saratoga, Newport or Long Branch hotel, no matter which, to spend his money and his holiday. He was well dressed, and on the piazza he one day formed the acquaintance of Maria, a young lady of beauty and arrayed in the height of the mode. The impression was made upon the mind of Augustus that Maria was wealthy and high-born. He fell in love with her, but carefully concealed from her his occupation. He mysteriously talked of stocks, and made her believe that he was a man of large capital. After the holiday, Augustus returned to town and resumed his position behind the counter; and now we quote the words of the Tribune: "In a week or two after his return, Augustus' soul was not yet in his vocation. Already the heavier worries were coming in for the fall trade, and Augustus smiled, albeit sadly, at the change which overtook him as he stood at the counter, but an extra and peremptory order for custom-made shirts obliged him to visit one of the many seamstresses employed by the emporium. As Augustus turned down the narrow street of a remote, unfashionable locality, and rang the bell of a modest tenement house, his mind reverted to the past and he glanced nervously up and down the street, lest Maria from a passing carriage should detect him with the ominous parcel under his arm. He was relieved when the opposing door enabled him to enter. But as he did so the bundle slipped from his nervous fingers. For there, seated at a sewing machine, with her pretty fingers on the plate, and her slim foot on the treadle, sat Mary Jones—the Marie of his dreams."

Prospective Greatness. Long Branch is getting ambitious. We remember how that chilly, soft, comfortable place, years ago, used to afford shelter in hot weather for a few New Yorkers who fled to it under the scourge of Mr. Fahrenheit in hot blood. It has since grown big with a greatness which promises to make it a city. A few days ago we met the postmaster down there, who informed us that about 1,500 letters are sent out and about 5,000 received at the office daily. Last week some of his little sold there at astonishing prices—some fabled lots going at the rate of $10,000 an acre. A hotel is to be built which promises to be the largest in the United States. Then the opera and theatre are to be taken there in full bloom. Then the New York Stock Exchange is to follow during the warm summer months. Then a summer capital of the nation is to be built. Meanwhile Philadelphia and New York will meet together on the common ground of Long Branch, and build there a summer and city which shall be to America what Bristol is to England. Why not?—Golden Age.

A Watkins Glen correspondent writes: Ex-Governor Horatio Seymour, Rev. Dr. McCosh of Princeton College, many of the Erie and Pennsylvania magnates and a host of other notables have been sojourners here of late. Bishop Cox and family are to arrive on the 25th for two weeks' recreation. Governor Dix is heralded as coming, and the knowing ones say that President Grant has signified his intention to spend a day or two here a little later in the season.

None having visited Europe will fail to appreciate the following: A prominent Boston gentleman, a proprietor of one of the leading Boston dailies, had just arrived in the steamer from Europe, and met with a New York friend, while registering his name in the exchange of the Grand Central Hotel. The New Yorker evidently expects to hear the property tale of those fresh from the tour, and begins thus: "Hallo, Charley! Glad to see you back! How do you enjoy yourself, old fellow? Have a good time? 'Gosh, Charley, I enjoyed myself. 'I'm so glad to get back, I can't tell I've had nothing to eat since I've been away. Prunes and sour wine going, and prunes and sour wine coming. Pick a daisy at London—blond beef and cold mutton, ale and fog. Prunes—sour wines and fancy crabs, Germany, etc.,—bitter beer, sour wine, and Heaven knows what in the dishes. The candles, and paid service everywhere. Not a first-class sensible hotel like this, thank you, to say nothing of the price. This the Lord put him in the steamship. The ocean?" suggested Charley's friend. "Prunes and sour wine I tell you," cried Charley. "Let's go up stairs and get something to eat." And they disappeared in the elevator to the evident amusement, not to say gratification, of nine host Powers and of a number of other gentlemen who had thus heard European and American hotels so summarily and truthfully criticised and the Grand Central "brought to the front" in such few words.

In a letter from Gettysburg, Edward McPherson, Clerk of the United States House of Representatives, who lives near that city, is represented as having expressed the opinion that the back-slapper grab will be repudiated by the next Congress; that the feeling against it in every direction is intense and unrelenting.

OPINIONS OF DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS. "No. 17 Arlington St., London, England, 6, 1870. "I think you for the opportunity of expressing my opinion of the great value of the 'New American Cyclopædia.' I own the work and have it with me, and am in the habit of consulting it every day to my very great advantage. It is most admirable. "U. S. Minister to the Court of St. James."

"Philadelphia, Nov. 1, 1869. I consider the New American Cyclopædia, published by D. Appleton & Co., vastly superior for the American reader to any other Cyclopædia now before the public. "REV. HERBERT SIMMONS."

"Boston, Oct. 25, 1869. I own Appleton's Cyclopædia, and use it constantly. It should be in every library, public and private—I would say in every house, within reach of every family. The young should use it. "CHARLES SCHUMER."

"I use the 'New American Cyclopædia' every day, generally many times a day. I think it the best work of the kind in existence. It is singularly well suited to families. The edition which grew up in a house where there is a copy of it within reach, can hardly escape becoming well-informed persons. I value it very highly, and am glad of this opportunity of testifying my gratitude. "JAMES FARTON."

"Tribune Office, N. Y. City, Oct. 30, 1869. MY DEAR SIR: I have used the 'New American Cyclopædia' since the first issue, and I can say, with confidence, that it is the best work of the kind in print. Yours, &c., HORACE GREELY."

"North Shore, N. Y., N. Y., Oct. 19, 1869. Appleton's Cyclopædia is unquestionably the best popular manual of general reference for an American. "WASHINGTON, Nov. 12, 1869. DEAR SIR: I quite agree with Mr. Curtis, that the 'New American Cyclopædia' is the best work of the kind in print. I have used it for some time, and I can say, with confidence, that it is the best work of the kind in print. I value it very highly, and am glad of this opportunity of testifying my gratitude. ### LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

CITY NOTES.

—Glorious night now. Splendid days to work, and oh, such nights to sleep!

—P. T. Barnum's big show, which was to be along this way some time in August, will very likely wait awhile longer.

—The evening performances at the Opera House are very entertaining now, the new troupe being a good one and Nellie Edwards first.

—Enoch Carter, the red hot (and headed) bill poster in the lower portion of the city, has just been putting up some new bill boards—large enough to post the largest circus bills on.

—The school misses up town have all returned from their vacation, and again show their smiling faces each morning and evening as they glide gracefully down the street on their way to school duties.

—The seediest looking street musician of the season was in Garden street on Monday afternoon with a lugubrious face, a sullied eye, a vividly rubicund nasal appendage, and a tank full of tangle leg whiskey.

—Congratulations are freely expressed about town over The Freeman's announcement that water works will be a reality. Now let darning on the subject cease, and actual work at once begin.

Yesterday 49 canal boats laden with 6,290 tons of coal reached tide water at Edlyville through the Delaware & Hudson canal.

Tendered and Declined.

Prof. H. R. Jolley, late of this city, has been tendered the position of principal of one of the Grammar Schools in the city of Troy, at a salary of fourteen hundred dollars, but has declined the same because of a previous engagement as principal of the High School at Clyde, in this state.

Mary Powell's Moonlight Excursion.

Some time during the coming moonlight nights the Mary Powell, under the charter of Gurnsey Betts, the pilot, and Bishop, the mate, will go on a moonlight excursion down the river. When all the arrangements for the affair are perfected due notice will be given.

Postponed.

The Wawarsing races have been postponed until the 8th and 9th days of September on account of the late heavy rains. This track is one of the best half mile tracks in the country, and as the affair is in the hands of honorable men, no doubt the result will be satisfactory, and the number of spectators also.

What Has Become of It?

The annual meeting of the incorporators and members of the Ulster General Hospital project will be held on Tuesday, September 21. Notice of the hour and place of meeting will be duly given. The object of the meeting will be, principally, to elect a Board of Governors.

The Very Latest.

The very latest fashion in belts for ladies are those made of alligator skin, mounted with real or oxidized silver, and worn with the chateaubain. The skin of the alligator being very soft and pliable is well adapted to the purpose, and the large, wavy grain, like the skin of the Persian lamb, gives it peculiar richness. By the intensely fashionable females belts of alligator skin are preferred to those of Russian leather.

Complimentary.

Rev. A. Blauvelt of this city is contributing an article on "Modern Skepticism" to Scribner's Monthly, which has attracted a great deal of attention and gained for him most complimentary notices. His second article, entitled "Modern Skepticism—What Our Theologians can do about it," appeared in the September number of the Monthly, and the New York Evening Post states that the sale edition of that number has been completely exhausted, so great is the demand, mainly on account of Mr. Blauvelt's article.

The Wheel of Fortune.

Near the close of the races Saturday afternoon a couple of chaps from the upper part of this city fell into a dispute about the "wheel of fortune" game. One of the disputants had his coat torn clean off him, and it came near ending in a free fight. There was quite a large crowd present, and some half dozen were pulling for a muss, when officer Myer jumped in, and notwithstanding the threats to maul him, bravely put a stop to the fracas. The wheel of fortune man put his wheel under the arm and left without hesitation.

Blackberries.

The blackberries, it is said, never were so abundant as they now are in the towns of Olive and Shandaken, yet we have none in our city markets. Some of our residents who are bound to have blackberries without getting them via New York, and paying the middleman a fancy price, organized a berry picking squad, and on Monday took the noon train for the Shandaken Center, where they will sojourn at Lament's hotel when they are not filling their pails and baskets with blackberries.

The Buzzards Cards.

Some time ago cards made their appearance bearing upon them a coffin with a corpse in it and the mournful inscription of "This man was talked to death." These have been followed by another card, which reads "Undoubtedly, when a person is being bored, upon the card the word 'BZZZZ' is underlined which is a bee-lire and the words 'I'm Dying.' These cards are of invaluable service to a person when approached by life insurance, book, sewing-machine and clothes-wringer agents. It may be considered a bold piece of work to 'buzz' a lady in a most effectual way to save one's self from getting talked to death. Keep a pocketful on hand all the time. They will undoubtedly lengthen your time on this terrestrial orb.—Poughkeepsie Eagle.

The Excursion To-morrow.

On Wednesday morning, To-morrow, at 8 A. M. the commodious steamer William Cook takes Protector Engine and Rapid Hose Companies on their excursion to Iona Island. Knowing the element of which both organizations are composed it is not too much praise to say this will doubtless prove the most enjoyable excursion that has left our wharves during the summer. Every arrangement that good taste and a desire to afford pleasure to their guests could devise has been made by the members of the companies having the duty of the affair in charge. The steamer is full of excursion boat on the river, having handsomely furnished saloons, rosy decks comfortably arranged, for the enjoyment of dancing, for which Goeller's band will furnish the music, a delightful sail to one of the most beautiful spots along the river, and the refreshments entrusted to the hands of purveyors who thoroughly understand the wants of the people and have to provide for them. The boat will remain at Iona Island for some hours, giving all an opportunity to enjoy the various arrangements for pleasure with which that summer resort is provided, and arriving home at a seasonable hour.

Wonders of the Shawangunk Mountains—Old Ninety-Nine and a Pirate Captain's Cave—Trip to Avesting Lake—The Foot Above the Water—Grand Scenery and a Reporter's Title.

To lovers of nature the Shawangunk Mountain has always been a favorite resort. With its broad summit, where solitary recluses during the greater portion of the year, its rocks, precipices, caves, lakes, cascades and streams of water, the high cliffs, from whose tops the country on either side is brought within range for many miles—it could hardly be less than a fine field for the lover of the wild, rough beauty, for which our country is becoming noted.

Besides the natural resources of the mountain, there is connected with it many a romance and Indian legend, while wonderful stories have been told of the countless stores of gold and silver that lie hidden within the caves along its sides and on the summit. One of these stories, no doubt, the old people who reside in the Wawarsing Valley will remember. There was an old Indian chief called Ninety-nine, the sole remnant of some tribe that once held sway in the valley, who was a great hunter and a brave warrior. He lived for some years among the settlers, doing nothing in summer, but hunting and trapping in the winter.

One Benny Dupuy, a well-known resident of Wawarsing, became a great favorite with Ninety-nine, who one day told him he would show him a sight that he would not forget for many a year. The two started up the mountain, and after traveling several miles, over open fallen rocks and decayed trees, they came to the dry channel of a mountain brook. Here Ninety-nine blindfolded Benny, and after proceeding up this natural path about an hour, the bandage was taken from his eyes, and he found himself at the foot of a high ledge of rocks. Ninety-nine rolled aside a large stone, which disclosed a dark passage-way, that seemed to run under the floor. After following this passage by the aid of a lighted candle for a short distance, they came to a large vaulted room that seemed cut out of solid rock. It looked like the abode of a fairy. The floors were so thickly covered with a rich, costly carpet that the heavy boots of the hunters made no sound. The sides of the room were partly covered with tapestry, while costly cases of bright metal stood on the floor, and paintings hung suspended from the walls. In one corner was a large chest which Ninety-nine opened, and told Benny to look in. There, to his great astonishment, he saw heaps upon heaps of gold and silver and precious stones. The lid was then closed, and after Benny's eyes had been duly bandaged the two returned to their starting place. Soon after the Ninety-nine disappeared, and though Benny searched the mountain over, again and again, he was unable to find any trace of the wonderful cave and the more wonderful treasure it contained. Benny often told the story, and as he was a man never known to tell an untruth, many a hunter spent weeks and months in vain searching for the cave, which some supposed must have been that of a pirate captain, who had there stored his ill-gotten gains.

We could relate many tales as strange and romantic concerning this mountain, but we have taken up our pen for another task; to describe a trip taken by our own reporter in company with a couple of other gentlemen, to explore the summit of this mountain, and learn something of the position of Long Pond, or Avesting Lake, that lies near its southern base. Here, 1,500 feet above tide water, lies a beautiful sheet of water, but little known even by the people who reside at the foot of the mountain, and yet it is hardly surpassed in wild beauty by anything in the state. Last week Tuesday, G. B. Benedict, one of the editors of the Ellenville Press, C. A. Van Wagoner, a lawyer, and a Freeman reporter could be seen carrying behind a good team through Kerkhoffer's, and up the side of the mountain, to strike the old trapline that runs regularly toward the summit and through the Traps to New Paltz. This trapline, formerly known by the high sounding title of the Wawarsing & New Paltz trapline, was once famous. There was a company that raised some $20,000 and built a road from the stage coach near the residence of Felix Kelly, some several miles up the mountain side, through a deep cut or gorge, called the Traps, to New Paltz. This road or trapline was to open up a vast trade between the two countries that lay on opposite sides of the mountains, but alas for human expectations! it was not long before the toll houses had to be closed, and the grass soon began to grow in the roadway. The only portion now kept in repair is that part above Kerkhoffer's, and up the side of the mountain, which is looked after by the people who reside along the route. The grade is an easy one, and it was not long before the team had covered some six or seven miles and drew near to the residence of Munson Decker on the summit. A little way beyond this, about three-quarters of a mile from the Traps, they turned direct to the right in a wood road, and passed along the top of the mountain several miles through a most wild and romantic country, where one could see high precipices, swift mountain streams that went roaring by, and acres of white, flat rocks.

The team was finally left in a covey by the roadside, and the explorers made the rest of the journey on foot. About one o'clock in the afternoon the party arrived on the northern shore of the lake, and soon after crossed over to the opposite side, where, upon climbing the high cliff that rose perpendicularly from the water's edge 150 feet, they could look down at its calm waters stretching away towards the west sparkling in the light of the sun. This lake, as near as they could judge, is two and one-half miles in length by one-half to three-fourths of a mile in width. It lies deep down within the rocks—gray, moss-covered rocks, covered with the ferns. Upon its shores no animal showed the presence of man. A deep solitude reigned, only broken by the cry of some lone bird that had strayed from its mate, or the subdued voices of the men who sat upon the rocks and drank in the beautiful scene. Near this lake are three points that look as though a host of huge rocks had been piled up until they reached far above the surrounding ledges. One of these points can be seen from a magnificent landscape view on both sides of the mountains, and of the mountain itself almost from one end to the other; the last is a view of pine woods, ledges of rocks, gulls, deep gorges, hollows and cascades, while the lake seemed sleeping at the foot. The party ascended one of these points, and after viewing the scene and taking a few courses, and noting the height of the point as compared with that of the Overlook, High Point, Paliz Point and Sam's Point, they returned, following the ledge, which became separated from the lake by a deep ravine or gulf called the Dark Hole. Through this gulf the party were obliged to pass, or else tramp back many miles to the old route. It was surely not a desirable undertaking, and as they looked down 150 feet in the abyss, the bottom of which presented only a mass of tangled blackberry bushes, thorns, hawthorn fallen trees and scrubby places, with a marsh extending down the centre, they thought, indeed, if Dante could have viewed this spot he would have made honorable mention of it in his Inferno, though whether the lost spirits struggling in the tangled maze would have been a lawyer, editor and reporter, they know not. Surely there were enough curses ascending from the bottom of that infernal gulf during the passage of these gentlemen to leave behind with almost any place of torment, and there is hardly a doubt but a strong smell of brimstone still pervades the place. However the party descended. The first move made in the right direction was an attempt of the Freeman reporter to climb over the but of a log about sixty feet in length, that had been in some mysterious manner bereft of its bark. The next instant a wild looking man was seen astride that log sliding towards the top with the speed that would have defied a thunderbolt to distance it. In one hand the figure held a double barreled gun, while the other hand was raised to clutch the logs that grew alongside. Happily a large limb was stretched across the log near the top which checked its progress, else he would have been shot in mid air, and dropped perhaps a hundred feet directly in the centre of the abyss, where that reporter no doubt would have stayed until eternity. It took the party nearly an hour to find their way across this difficult, but as that they found a log road, and it was not many minutes before they were again on their way, however bound.

We think it strange some one before this has not erected a house at this lake. Where could be found a more beautiful spot? Everything could be had to make a mountain house famous. There's Avesting Lake with its rocky shores, its caves, bays and cliffs, with here and there a genuine cave into which one can sail with a boat. There are the points, not one, but three; with a wonderful view, and the whole flat summit of the mountain over which to make drives at a light expense, for the flat rocks are a natural roadway and need but little of the help of man. A fine drive can be made from Sam's Point to this place, while the road to Kerkhoffer's is already a good mountain track that would not need more than five thousand dollars improvement to make it far superior to that leading to any mountain resort in the county. The same party are going to make another trip to this lake and camp out for a few days in order to fully explore the grounds surrounding it and if possible find the cave of Ninety-nine.

Crime in Dutchess County—Something Equal to an Ulster County Horror.

At half-past six o'clock on Sunday morning, officer Lester, of Pleasant Valley, arrived at the jail in Poughkeepsie with a man named Cookingham, whom he had arrested near Salt Point upon the charge of assassinating Mr. Ensign Wiley, a farmer living at Clinton Hollow. The circumstances of the case, as near as we could learn, are as follows:

On Saturday morning Mr. Wiley came to this city on business. He brought with him in his wagon a quantity of corned pork, which he wished to sell. After arriving here he met Cookingham, who accompanied him about the city, and assisted him in disposing of his pork. After the pork was sold, Cookingham asked Mr. Wiley to lend him one dollar. Wiley did so, and Cookingham went off. He soon returned, however, and asked Wiley to follow him to ride out to Clinton Hollow with him. This Wiley consented to also. On the way out, and when near the Salt Point toll-gate, Cookingham told Wiley to stop his horses and he would get over into the back part of the wagon and fix some hands which were crowding upon the seat. Wiley stopped the team, Cookingham stepped over the seat into the back part of the wagon, and immediately struck Wiley in the head, (it is supposed with a knife) inflicting an ugly wound. He then struck him on the back of the head and in the neck three or four times more, when Wiley managed to get upon his feet. He then grappled with Cookingham, and both fell from the wagon. Wiley then commenced to yell "Murder!" at the top of his voice. Luckily, assistance was at hand, and the assassin was taken care of until the arrival of officer Lester, of Pleasant Valley, who took him in charge, and by direction of Justice McCord, brought him to the jail in this city for safe keeping. He will be taken to the Valley again this morning, and given a hearing before Justice McCord, who will of course commit him to jail in this city.

Mr. Wiley is very severely cut, and when taken up, presented a miserable sight, being covered with blood and dirt. What the result of his injuries will be, it is hard to tell as yet.—Poughkeepsie News.

Personal.

General Joseph S. Smith of this city, one of the state delegates to the National Temperance Convention which convenes at Saratoga to-day, left for that place on Monday morning. After the adjournment of the convention the General, with a party of friends from Philadelphia, makes a visit to Montreal and Lake George.

Calvert Vanx of this city has been voted the architect of the new prison for the city of New York.

Shooting Gallery.

D. R. FRENCH has removed his famous SHOOTING GALLERY from upper Kingston to 12 Lackawanna St., opposite Opera House. All you fellows who think you can hit the BULL'S EYE drop in and try your skill.

Be sure and get the genuine Remé's Pain-Killing Magic Oil. Avoid all others as spurious imitations. Don't use spurious Magic Oils and then blame us. No persons have a right to use the name Magic Oil except Remé & Sons. It is their legal trade mark. Sold by R. Devo and all druggists in Rondout and Kingston.

A WORD TO WORKING PEOPLE OF BOTH SEXES.—Mechanics, artisans, factory hands, and people who labor for a living, find it very difficult if not impossible to keep the hands free from stains. Hand Sapolio will not only remove every particle of stain, and what is called "grained in dirt," but it will also keep the skin soft and pliable, rendering the muscular action as quick and easy as the case with those who do not perform hand labor. It is only 10 and 15 cents a can, according to size. Every mechanic should use it constantly in place of all other soaps.

Soda, Kestogen and Vichy Water on Draught.

Just received at KNAPP'S Drug Store, next door to the Postoffice, Garden street, Rondout.

Important.

To churches holding Pic-nics or Festivals. Arrangements can be made with O. Hermance, Music Hall, for ice cream, candies, &c., more satisfactory than at any other place in the state. Call at O. Hermance's before you make arrangements elsewhere, which may save you some dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed.

100,000,000.

Men, women and children wanted every day and every hour in the day to get their meals, which are served in fine style and at reasonable prices at

O. HERMAN'S, Music Hall.

Fruit.

The HUCKSTER SALOON has started the ball rolling for the season's trade in the very finest Peaches, Dutchess County Grapes, &c. Orders left at the Huckle in the fall will be faithfully attended to. Good, well-selected fruit is always better and cheaper than common, dried up stuff, at any price. Peaches wholesale and retail.

Too Little Wind.

The good people of the First R. D. Church were much troubled in spirit Sunday night to understand what the organ meant by creating such dismal sounds. At one moment the organ would be galloping to keep up with the choir, and the next minute the choir would get up a tremendous burst of speed to catch the organ. Finally the two started off side by side as they went into the doxology, but as they reached the latter part of the second line, and were going finely and squarely, the wind of the organ gave out completely, and the choir had to finish the race alone, which it did in excellent time. We should say the freak of the organ was caused by the giving way of the muscles of the arms of the small boy who supplies that instrument with wind. This caused a sudden and most premature collapse, and was no fault of the organist.

VICINITY.

—Roxbury has a two-thirds bay crop.
—Sing Sing claims a white sparrow.
—Another bigamist arrested in Albany. A young widow is the victim.
—The Delhi Lyceum reading room is now open for members of the Lyceum.
—The quality of the pear crop along the river will not be equal to that of last year.
—Fence-moving and street-widening has become epidemic in Nyack.
—The Albany jail contains nearly one hundred inmates.
—An old woman aged 82 years was in Monticello the other day with blackberries for sale.

—We learn from the Coxsack News that the New Baltimore Macons are fitting up a new hall for their lodge in that village.

—A young man committed suicide in Troy last Friday night by shooting himself. No cause assigned for the act.

—No! Butline's recent bragadozo pistol target firing on a down river small steamboat, on which he and his troupe were traveling, shows that his temperance reform stories are again for a time at a loss. Pity 'tis 'tis true!

—The Rockland Journal remarks that the late heavy rains have demonstrated the superiority of the macadamized streets of Nyack over those which are not so. Hurry up the gravel. To comment on the above is to call the attention of Kingston generally to the facts stated, and the moral to be deduced.

—The Delaware Republican has a very sensible, truthful article on the folly of many well-to-do farmers selling out and removing to populous places. It urges all such inclined to use their extra means for household farm, improvement and a gradual emancipation from over-heavy farm labor.

—Oneonta is threatened with a new paper. Too many churches and too many journals amount to but little single influence in small places, unless a rapid growth in population is taking place. Oneonta is claimed to be growing fast, but should be moderate about too many more showy auxiliaries.

—The Newburgh Journal says a young married man of that city has been before the Recorder on an alleged charge of rape, preferred by a young domestic that lived at his house. The accused emphatically denies the allegation. No names mentioned. The accused was released on $1,000 bail.

—Mr. George Groathead, the proprietor of the Central Hotel, Millerton, came near being suffocated by "damp" in a deep well which he was cleaning a few days ago. He, however, had strength enough to get in the bucket and give the signal to be drawn up, when restoratives were successfully applied.—Poughkeepsie News.

—Sunday morning a robber entered Gray's Hotel at Catskill, and robbed George Clark of Freehold, Grease county, of $17, and also Captain Abram Post of New Baltimore of $70. Just as the robber was making his escape, a lively struggle ensued, during which the thief was knocked down, the Captain dislocating his thumb. The thief succeeded in escaping, but left his hat, vest and $60 of Captain P.'s money behind him.
